Brightleaf Solutions Announces Alliance with RiseNow

To provide a complete solution for contract lifecycle management system (CLM) implementation with legacy contract data migration.

Brookline, MA – Brightleaf Solutions, Inc., a leading provider of contract data extraction and analytics solutions for tracking contract data and RiseNow, a leading Supply Chain Advisor and Integrator helping global to mid-size organizations transform their supply chain into a valuable business asset announced they have forged a strategic partnership.

A successful contract management system deployment needs careful planning, configuration, and a controlled rollout. The migration of legacy contracts and their accompanying data into the CLM is a vital component for ensuring system acceptance and increased investment. RiseNow and Brightleaf enable their clients to be confident that they are obtaining a tailored, ready-to-use CLM solution by delivering services that cover the vast range of needs for a successful installation.

Contract Management Systems require a very detailed implementation that is best handled by experienced implementors who are intimately familiar with the process and the systems. RiseNow with more than 20 years of experience implementing supply chain solutions understands the needs of the clients, helping its customers reduce costs, minimize risk, and improve overall operational efficiency. Brightleaf specializes in legacy contract migration of the previously executed contracts, OCR's documents, extracts metadata the meta-data to the client's specifications to populate the CLM. This provides the clients with a ready-to-use system for all departments.

Samir Bhatia, CEO of Brightleaf said, "A CLM software cannot be put into its best use unless all the required active and legacy data is uploaded on it for efficient contract management and analytics. The partnership will help in the successful implementation and roll-out of the solution by providing integrated technology deployment and data migration services to our clients, making the process smooth and successful."

Brightleaf's proprietary software helps analyze and abstract attributes, provisions, clauses, and even obligations from any type of contractual document. Using customized configurations tailored to each client's requirements, the software identifies and extracts all the terms and legal provisions from executed contracts and any associated companion documents.

"We are excited to partner with RiseNow and look forward to working with them to cater a joint contract meta-data extraction and management solution to our customers" Samir added.
